New York's Holiday

NEW YORK, October 28. The rain storm which prevailed all day yesterday ceased last night, but the weather this morning is very unpromising for the festivities which are to take place in connection with the inauguration of the Bartholdi statue of Liberty. A slight fog hangs over the city and obscures, in a measure, the elaborate decorations of buildings with which the city has been beautified. French and American flags are flying from housetops and windows in every direction, and a general holiday appearance is presented by moving bodies of soldiers, militia, civic organizations and by the collection on sidewalks of great crowds of people. Business, during the day, will be almost entirely suspended. Public schools will be closed and all New York will join in the celebration. Visitors from all sections of the country have been coming into the city for two days past and this morning thousands more were added to the great throng, the prospects of wet weather in no way deterring them.

THE LAST TOUCHES

The storm greatly interfered with work on Bedloe's Island yesterday, but as little was left to do it did not matter much whether it rained or not. Workmen tore down the narrow steps that led up the embankment and replaced them with a wider and more substantial stairway. They also laid broad wooden walks leading to the grand entrance in front of the fort. The platform that has stood in one of the northwestern angles of the enclosure was also removed and the platform for speakers made ready for their reception. A handsome silk French flag will be placed over the face of the statue. At the word from President Cleveland it will be drawn, unveiling the head of the goddess.

THE GREAT PARADE

It is estimated that fully a million of people took part in the festivities. The wet pavements, the mud, chilly atmosphere and general discomfort were no appreciable bar to the public enthusiasm. From the boundary lines east and west at the river points, the drift of people moved until when nearing the line of march there grew to be a tide of humanity jammed up against the police lines and sent back a constantly flowing stream into the nearby avenues. The procession was to have started at 9 o'clock but at that hour it had only begun to form. The Fifth U S artillery, commanded by Col John Hamilton, and the engineer corps took their position in front of Secretary Whitney's house at Fifty eighth street and Fifth avenue a few minutes after nine. Next came the Old Guard, who stood near carriages in and members of the cabinet to leave Whitney's residence, where they had spent the night. Promptly at ten the president accompanied by Secretary Bayard descended the steps and entered an open carriage. They were followed by Secretary Whitney, Postmaster General Vilas, Secretary Lamar, Rear Admiral Luce and staff and Major Whipple. The Old Guards preceded the carriages, and at 10 15 commenced the march down Fifth avenue. Both sides of the avenue were crowded with people, who waved their hats and applauded loudly as the president's carriage passed. On all sides of the street, from Central park down to the reviewing stand on Twenty fourth street, different military companies and civic organizations were formed. The carriages containing the president and cabinet were followed by a battalion of 250 police. The United States naval brigade came next with the engineer corps, which consisted of 250 men. The Second regiment N. G. of New York then fell in line, together with a detachment of the Massachusetts volunteer militia. These were followed by the Seventh, Eighth, Twelfth, Eleventh and First regiments and French societies numbering 2500 men.

THE GOVERNOR

of Massachusetts, Maine, Vermont, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, New York, Maryland and their staffs together with United States judges entered carriages at the Windsor hotel and fell into line behind the French associations. After these the following divisions were made up of mayors [and officials from various cities, visiting police and firemen, veterans of 1812, Grand Army posts, civic societies, Volunteer Firemen's association and Knights of Pythias of Indiana numbering 2,000 and Odd Fellows and other organizations.

THE NEW VISION

The president reached the reviewing stand at Madison square at 10 40. He was greeted with hearty cheers as he drove down the avenue and drew up in front of the stand. After the president had taken his place on the reviewing stand a member of the French delegation was presented to him. Most of the space in the stand was reserved for the French guests. They were headed by M Bartholdi, Count De Lesseps, Admiral Jauréguiberry, General Kellsierm, Colonel De Puy, M Rouvier, Colonel De Lousselal and Lieutenant Villepert. The French delegation was in charge of Captain Ferdinand De Lesseps, Captain Schilling, Lieutenant Wells and Colonel Collins. Among other distinguished guests on the reviewing stand were General Sheridan and his staff, Governor Hill, accompanied by Lieutenant Governor Jones and staff.

AT THE REVIEWING STAND

Madison square when the president reached the reviewing stand was a vast sea of humanity. Side streets were choked and Broadway was clogged with vehicles and street cars above and below the intersection of the line of march. When Governor Hill mounted the platform there were cheers, but when Bartholdi the sculptor appeared and was generally recognized by the multitude who had seen his portraits on programmes and in illustrated papers a shout went up from the entire stand. The cry of Bartholdi, Bartholdi, was then caught upon both the reviewing and grand stands. Crowds on the avenue carried up and down heard the name and passed it to the people in the park and side streets until the air was rent with a roar of cheering that must have gladdened the heart of the Alsatian, who bowed and bowed his acknowledgements. Hansom cabs were driven to the rear of the stand came the president and his party. Instantly he was recognized and again the crowds shook the welkin with their shouts. Once at the reviewing stand President Cleveland was presented with three handsome baskets of flowers, the gifts of young ladies in the city.

PASSING IN REVIEW

As the various military and civic organizations passed they saluted by dropping their colors and the president responded by lifting his hat. Nearly every band in passing played the "Marseillaise," the French national hymn. As soon as the procession had passed, the president and party were driven to North river and were taken on board the Despatch. Marching Madison square to the north of the pedestal the procession turned its towards Park row and then marched down again toward Broadway. This was done in order to pass under the immense arch of evergreens, flags and mottoes erected building. It was just about noon when the column reached this point. The Tribune, Times, Sun and Mail and Express, and other newspaper buildings were all tastefully decorated, as were all flags generally in the lower part of town, the fronts of some of the immense structures being hidden almost from view.

THE NAVAL PARADE

The formation of the marine part of the parade began in the Hudson river, opposite West Forty fifth street at an early hour, but owing to the fog it was nearly one o'clock before the final gun was fired. At this time there were probably 100 vessels drawn up in two divisions, the first composed of the men of war and the second of tugs and smaller vessels. Some of these were beautifully decked with flags and bunting. It was after one o'clock when the signal gun to start was fired and the gun began its forward movement. The U S steamship Despatch lay at West Two hundred and thirty third street, and as the column of boats approached President Cleveland arrived with his suite and prepared to go on board, as the guns fired the president's salute. A halt was ordered until the Despatch got under way, when with a loud blast of whistles the column of boats followed in behind, bound I suppose to Bedloe's Island.

A dense fog that thickened from early morning, a drizzling rain and cutting northeasterly wind rendered Liberty day upon the water. There was for a single ray of sunlight to warm the hearts of the people of the two great republics whose hands so closely bound together by the sons of Lafayette the great struggle for freedom and the later work of M Bartholdi. Despite the dull and rainy weather people were not deprived. Thousands upon thousands of patriotic citizens of the cities of the Union were upon the waters of New York harbor celebrating this great event, a repetition of which in the lifetime of the present generation is not probable. They seemed to glory in facing the drenching rain and biting winds in fields, the drenching rain and biting winds that blew. As with the French people so with our own. The whole means for the great expenditures of the work have come from free contributions of the people themselves and thus the common people of both nations may justly point to a greater, a nobler monument in and of the history and progress and welfare of the human race than emperor, king or governments have ever raised. The statue on the Fourth of July 1884 in Paris was delivered to and accepted by the government by authority of the president of the United States, delegated to and executed by Minister Morton. To day, in the name of the citizens of the United States, who have completed the pedestal and raised thereon the statue, and of the voluntary committee who have executed the will of their fellow citizens, I declare, in your presence and in the presence of these distinguished guests from France, and of this august assemblage of honorable and honored men of our land, and of this countless multitude, that this splendid and united work of the two republics is completed and surrendered to the care and keeping of the government and people of the United States.

THE VEIL WITHDRAWN

At the conclusion of Senator Evarts' speech the signal was given and the veil was withdrawn from the face of the statue, amidst booming cannons and shrieking whistles from hundreds of steamers and other craft gathered around the island. This indescribable ovation continued for fully half an hour. Senator Evarts then, when the firing and hooting subsided, introduced Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, who in accepting the statue said, "The people of the United States accept with gratitude from their brethren of the French republic the grand and completed work of art we here inaugurate. This token of affection and consideration of the people of France demonstrates the kinship of the republics and conveys to us the assurance that in our efforts to commend to mankind the excellence of the government resting upon the popular will we still have beyond the American continent a steadfast ally. We shall be so to day as to be before the representation of a fierce and warlike god filled with wrath and vengeance, but we joyously contemplate our own deity, keeping watch and ward before the open gates of America and greater than all that have towered in ancient Troy. Instead of grasping, in her hand thunderbolts of terror and of death, she holds aloft the light which illuminates the way to man's enfranchisement. We will not forget that liberty has here made her home, nor shall her chosen altar be neglected. Willing votaries will constantly keep alive the fires, and these shall burn upon the shores of our sister republic to the east, reflected thereon and joined with answering rays a stream of light shall pierce the dark seas of ignorance and man's oppression until liberty enlightens the world.

THE FRENCH MINISTER

After President Cleveland came M A Lefevre, minister plenipotentiary, who spoke as the representative of the republic of France. He said:

In the presence of so imposing an assembly, and at the close of the ceremony which consolidates the friendship of two great nations it is an honor and hearty pleasure to me to present you in the name of the French lovers without and of the entire French nation sincere and warm assurance of sympathetic participation. The inauguration to-day is one splendid with solemn and impressive import, for it is one of those that form an epoch in history. This colossal statue of liberty, moulded by the great artist would anywhere attract attention and deference, but here, on American soil it evinces signal significance, symbolizing the existence and development of your nation during more than one hundred years. To us, Americans and Frenchmen, liberty is not only a common doctrine, it is also a family tie. From the alliance between the two nations springs forth the most dazzling manifestation of its expression and radiance through the universe. It will be an eternal honor to France to have seconded the effort of your heroism and to have undertaken in the first dawn the sublime prospects which were promised to mankind by your generous ardor. This symbol which we inaugurate to-day, is not a mere allegory, a pledge of fraternal union between the two greatest republics of the world. It is greeted simultaneously by more than one hundred millions of freemen who tender friendly hands to each other across the ocean. Among the thousands of Europeans who are daily conveyed to these hospitable shores no one will pass before this glorious emblem without immediately perceiving its moral greatness and without greeting it with respect and thankfulness.

THE MEMORIAL ADDRESS

was delivered by Hon. Chauncey M. Depew. He said:

We dedicate this statue to the friendship of nations and the peace of the world. The spirit of liberty embraces all races in a common brotherhood, also voices in all languages the same needs and associations. The full power of its expansive and progressive influence cannot be reached until wars cease, armies are disbanded and international disputes settled by lawful tribunals and principles of justice. Then the people of every nation, secure from invasion and free from the burden and menace of great armaments, can calmly and dispassionately promote their own happiness and prosperity. The speaker then reviewed the progress of the nation, dwelling at length upon the aid the French nation had given during the revolution. He gave a brief biographical sketch of Lafayette, of his resolve to aid the colonies in their struggles against Great Britain and of the obstacles which he overcame in order to make a tender of his services to Washington. Bringing the history of the country down through the rebellion to the present day, always keeping in view our relations with France, the orator touched upon the monument and symbols of other nations and times and added: but they are all dwarfs in size and pigmies in spirit beside this mighty structure and its inspiring thought. Higher than the monument in Trafalgar square which commemorates the victories of Nelson on the sea, higher than the Column Vendome which perpetuates the triumphs of Napoleon on land, higher than the towers of Brooklyn bridge, which exhibit the latest and grandest results of science, invention and industrial progress, this statue of Liberty rises toward the heavens to illustrate an idea which moved the 300 at Thermopylæ and armed the ten thousand at Marathon, which drove Tarquin from Rome and aimed the arrow of Tell, which charged with Cromwell and his Ironsides and accompanied Sidney to the block, which fired the farmers gun at Lexington and razed the Bastille in Paris, which inspired the charter in the cabin of the Mayflower and the declaration of independence from the continental congress. He concluded as follows: I devoutly believe that from the unseen and the unknown two great souls have come to participate in this celebration. The faith in which they died fulfilled, the cause for which they battled triumphant, the people they loved in the full enjoyment of the rights for which they labored and fought and suffered, the spirit voices of Washington and Lafayette join in the glad acclaim of France and the United States to liberty enlightening the world.

Then the audience sang "Old Hundred," and the benediction was pronounced by Right Rev. C. Potter, D D. A national salute from the guns of all the forts and all the men of war in the harbor closed the exercises.

THE CLOSE OF THE DAY.

At the close of the exercises on Bedloe's Island there was an inexcusable lack of arrangement in leaving the island and embarking on the steamers for home. The French visitors were scattered here and there in the crush and detained in it for nearly an hour. Thus closed one of the greatest days in the history of the city. The naval display and procession was the largest ever gathered in the waters of this port, that at the recent international yacht races sinking into insignificance. It was on the programme to have a grand pyrotechnic display on the island and at the battery, and to illuminate the statue for the first night, but the rain and fog rendered both futile and they were abandoned.

The banquet given by the New York chamber of commerce in honor of the representatives of the French republic and invited guests was a notable one. Mr. James M. Brown presided. On his right were Messrs. Albert Lefaivre, Eugene Spuller, August Bartholdi, Governor David B Hill and others.

AN ENGLISH VIEW

LONDON, October 28. The Daily News, editorializing on the dedication of the Bartholdi statue of Liberty, says, "It is a great mistake to think the statue will increase the friendship between the two countries. America did not want the statue. She took it because it was offered her. When the last cannon boomed New York was richer by a remarkable statue, and that's about all."

The republican congressional committee expect to reduce the democratic majority in the next house to 15 or 20, if not to wipe it out entirely. They hope to gain members in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and other northern states, as well as in several of the southern states, where the protection idea has made considerable progress during the past few years.

Two of the foremost champions of civil service reform on the democratic side in the last house have been defeated for renomination. They were Congressman Cox of North Carolina and Findlay of Maryland. Both of these gentlemen fearlessly advocated the cause of civil service reform on the floor of the house, and vigorously defended the president's policy with reference to removals from office. Mr. Findlay was defeated mainly through the efforts of Senator Gorman, Eugene Higgins and other Maryland democratic politicians who are well known advocates of the "spoils" doctrine. He has decided to run as an independent candidate, and will receive considerable republican support.

STATUE OF LIBERTY

Yesterday was a great day in New York city and a great day for the American people. In presenting the beautiful statue of Liberty Enlightening the World to the United States of America the French nation has placed a seal upon the bond of friendship between the people of the two countries begun a hundred years ago. And in accepting the present the American people reach forth to grasp the hand of friendship once more extended to them. They fully realize the great moral influence that the gift will have in binding the hearts of the two people in love for that liberty and independence for which their fathers fought in common. As the president of the United States stood up yesterday to receive, on behalf of this government, the wonderful piece of art, he marked the triumphant moment in the life of Auguste Bartholdi, the sculptor. To his untiring perseverance and zeal are due the great work. It was at a dinner at the residence of M. Laboulaye, a French gentleman of wealth, during the time of the empire, that the idea of a gift that should mark the gratitude of nations was first originated. M. Bartholdi, then a young man, was present, and he became so imbued with the idea that, in a visit to America a few years after, he made a design of the present statue and interested prominent Americans in the project. On his return to France a society called the French-American union was formed to prosecute the work and raise, by subscription, the money necessary—more than a million francs. The actual moulding of the huge cast began in 1875. The birth of the statue was celebrated on November 6 of that year by a dinner at the Hotel du Louvre, at which the American minister, Mr. Washburne, and all the prominent members of the French-American union were present. The right hand of the goddess was struck off in colossal proportions and sent to the Centennial exhibition at Philadelphia in 1876. In the winter of 1877 a joint resolution passed both houses of congress accepting the statue, and General Sherman was appointed to select the site. He wisely confirmed Bartholdi's choice of Bedloe's Island. Money for the prosecution of the work was hard to raise, but M. Bartholdi by hard work managed to so far complete the work as to be able to have the head of the figure on exhibition at the Paris exposition of 1878. It was on October 21, 1881, that Minister Morton drove the rivet into the first piece to be mounted. From year to year Count Ferdinand De Lesseps, who had succeeded M. Laboulaye as president of the French committee, turned the statue over formally to the United States through Mr. Morton. The American committee will find the work of raising money for the erection of the pedestal had many difficulties. Money came in slowly by subscription, the governor of New York vetoed a bill appropriating $50,000 on the ground of unconstitutionality and congress failed to appropriate money and it was not until March, 1885, that the New York World took hold of the matter and by a grand effort raised the money for the completion of the pedestal. Bartholdi himself chose Bedloe's Island fifteen years before the site of his great monument. No one, in fact, could have been a happier one for the purpose. From the shores of the bay the level island looks like the natural base of the vast statue and its solid faced pedestal. The statue measures 151 feet and one inch from the bottom of the plinth to the tip of the torch flame, and stands to all 305 feet and 11 inches above low water mark. The forefinger of the goddess's right hand is over seven feet long and over four feet in circumference at the second joint. The eye is two feet wide and the nose more than three feet long. The total weight of the statue is about twenty-five tons. The Goddess of Liberty is the largest work of its kind that has ever been completed. The legendary Colossus of Rhodes could not possibly have had the shape or bigness attributed to it. The colossal statue of Arminius, in Bavaria, is about ninety-four feet in height, that of St. Charles Borromeo, on the shores of Lake Maggiore, seventy-two feet. The Virgin of Puy comes next, fifty-two feet, and the statue of Assyria last, scarcely more than a foot shorter. All of them shrink out of countenance by the gigantic copper figure on Bedloe's Island.

The sculptor has done his work well and has not given to the world simply a colossal statue of a woman with more than man's strength and woman's dignity, but has created the figure of a graceful, deep browed woman, whose richly pleated robes hang in soft, rounded folds about her simply breast and limbs, and luxuriant hair crowned with a sparkling diadem of light. And through it all shines, as it ought to shine the suggestion of that other passion for liberty for which the men of the revolution spilled their blood.

The American people accept this royal gift with the spirit in which it was given and in exciting the bond of fellowship would exclaim "Long live its generous donors, 'Vive la France!'"

Mr. Black, the democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania, shared the elevator of the Harrisburg capitol the other day and found that the officials part san republican who runs it had decorated the interior with portraits of General Beaver. He was much incensed, and with vigorous cane thrusts decapitated the pictures.

The death of Walter Smith, state head of the system of art instruction in Massachusetts, leaves the Boston Post, it says, a great many incidents and anecdotes. On his arrival there a dinner was given him and to it were invited some of the leading artists. Hunt, among them. Hunt was, as a matter of curiosity to hear what the Englishman would say, and not to say anything hims if. Smith saw that there was positive reserve in Hunt's manner, and that he was expected to take the initiative in the conversation. So he started out in a chatty, erratic manner intended to draw Hunt out in a chatty, erratic manner, and practically expressed himself to be an artist in order to touch art. Hunt quietly ate and took his hat and left.

How to Live Long

London Standard.

The secret of long life has once again been discovered this time in Flanders, and if we read aright the meaning of the announcement now made there is nothing to prevent any one from becoming a centenarian, provided he will do as he is told by the erudite Dr. Baggraeve, who professes physic in the University of Ghent. Not only does the Flemish professor proclaim long life to be a thing attainable in certain circumstances, but he offers it at a rate so cheap that to any one ambitious of outliving his welcome in the world it would be the veriest folly not to accept the gift. The medicine is not protected by any patent, though the fortunate proprietor might, by selling what most men wish to buy, have grown rich beyond the dreams of avarice. It is no elixir of life, no Cagliostra's drops, no fountain of perpetual youth, such as that which Ponce De Leon sought in Florida, and Sir John Mandeville drank of on the shores of Malabar, albeit he died of arthritic gout, the miraculous draught notwithstanding. Dr. Baggraeve's medicine is nothing more than common salt. But salt in sufficient quantity, and, so far as years are concerned, there is nothing to prevent any one from becoming a Sir Moses Montefiore or an Old Parr, or even from reaching the age of Thomas Damme, who is said to have died at 185, or of Peter Torton who declared—though he did not produce a parish register, that he was close on 184 the year before he made up his mind to go over to the majority.

Salt, the Ghentish doctor affirms, is the great panacea for every ill that flesh is heir to. Good health it is his opinion, is not a matter of chance or constitution, the law which regulates human life is very simple, all that we have to do is to take care that they shall develop themselves without obstruction. Salt will enable them to do this. If the blood is too rich, salt will purify it. If the blood is too poor, salt will thicken it. Culprits who have been punished by being compelled to eat unsalted bread have almost invariably died. The want of salt caused the outbreak of a terrible epidemic in Saxony, and Russian peasants, when threatened by the plague, have saved themselves by putting salt in their milk. Cholera will flee from salt. Consumption can be mastered by it. Of bacilli comparatively powerless in the face of two-thirds of an ounce of sodium chloride a day. Therefore he invites all to swallow his frugal physic, and, if not tired of the world at threescore and ten, go on living until centenarians are as common as fools and insurance companies are threatened with insolvency by annuitants who continue to live on funds to any sum for which the actuaries of the past have made no provision.

Lord Dudley's Oddities

From "Francis Doyle's Reminiscences."

Some years before (his last illness) he was the guest of a connection of mine, the late Mrs. Cunliffe Offley. Mrs. Cunliffe was aunt by marriage to the beautiful daughters of Sir Richard Brooke. On coming into the room Lord Dudley paused at once after the lovely Miss Brooke, (the present Lady Meath), who during the previous season had taken all hearts by storm. Mrs. Cunliffe answered, "I suppose you mean Harriett. She is now at home. But Mary, her sister, is with me this year in her place, and among ourselves we think Mary, though her beauty is of a different kind, quite as handsome as Harriett." "I dare say," retorted Lord Dudley, in a regretful tone, "that is always the way with you women. If there is one pretty girl among a lot of sisters you will try to poke the rest of them down our throats over her head." Mrs. Cunliffe, being an old friend, and being well aware of the Dudley eccentricities, was not much moved by this somewhat rough contradiction, observing only, "Well, it's nothing to me, Lord Dudley, but that is our opinion, agree with it or not as you please, and now we had better go to dinner."

To dinner they went, and Lord Dudley, sitting opposite the new beauty, very soon began to talk to himself and to employ expressions which as Punch would say, he might just as well have kept unuttered. "Confound the old jade, I almost think she is right after all, damn the old hag, she is indeed." "What are you talking about, Lord Dudley?" was the not unnatural inquiry.

"Well, Mrs. Cunliffe, you see it had just passed through my mind that your opinion as to Miss Brooke's beauty is quite justified, and I suppose that I have been saying it to myself how thoroughly I agree with you." After that, of course, there was nothing to be done except to stop that sort of conversation as soon as possible.

A RAILWAY HORROR.

An Express Train Dashes Through an Open Switch,

Causing the Worst Accident Known in the Northwest.

Victims Pinned in the Wreck and Burned to Death.

A Bad Railroad Wreck

MILWAUKEE, October 28.—The limited passenger train on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St Paul railroad, which left here last night at 10 o'clock, was derailed at Rio, when about three miles out, and thrown into an old stone quarry. The particulars are hard to get, but it is admitted at the general office of the company in this city that one coach and three sleepers were wrecked and five or six persons killed. Physicians left this city on an early train for the scene of the disaster.

MILWAUKEE, 7.30 p. m. It is now reported that out of ten persons who occupied the passenger coach seven were killed. A gentleman from Chicago and two children were the only ones saved from the passenger coach. One of the occupants of the sleepers were injured. Nothing has yet been learned regarding the number of wounded.

MILWAUKEE, October 28.—Engineer Sparks, first reported killed, was only slightly hurt. A passenger who was on the wrecked train says the scenes after the accident were harrowing. The passenger coach, which he says contained between 15 and 20 persons, was the first to leave the track, and was the only one that escaped at both ends and tread, and the smoke that enveloped the wreck prevented the imprisoned and injured passengers from escaping. Passengers from the sleepers gathered around the blazing cars, but they were powerless to render assistance. Men and women could be seen tearing their hair in the agony of the moment and frightful screams rended from the death trap. One lady was in particular, he says tore up one of the cars with almost superhuman strength and endeavored to break her way out of the flaming pyre, but her strength failed and she fell to the floor and met a horrible death. Only three persons escaped from the car, Mr. Lowenbach, his wife and two children. The man was rescued as he forced his way through the window on top of the car, with all the clothing on his body from the waist downward burned off and his flesh roasted, and bleeding from cuts inflicted by broken glass. Every one of the wrecked cars was consumed with the exception of the last sleeper, which was taken away from the burning wreck. All of the bodies of the victims burned in the wreck.

MILWAUKEE, October 28.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Portage, Wis., says that last night, soon after midnight, the west-bound limited express was ditched at East Lodi siding, a small station about thirteen miles east of this city, on the main line of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St Paul railroad. There are two side tracks at the siding, and at the time the train was due the last night both were occupied by freights, one by a wild train and the other by train No. 14, Conductor H. P. Hurley of this city, which had just pulled in from the west to switch. Limited to pass. No. 14 was very late and the conductor was at the head of the train, looking upon the brakeman to attend to the switch. One report says the rear brakeman, whose business it was to open the switch after the train, for some reason neglected all neither one. Another and more probable story is that he started back to close the switch but before he could reach it, the limited, which does not stop at Lodi except large place, came tearing down the grade at 50 miles an hour and left the rails the open switch. The siding is in a cut and the road curves so that the switch light cannot be seen from the east until the train is within a few rods, so the engineer of the limited could not see the switch light turned the wrong way until too late to stop. The engine left the track, ran a short distance, and brought up against the side of a cut, toppling over. The baggage and two regular coaches followed, while the sleepers kept the rails. The engine and the mail that went off were badly smashed and soon took fire from the stoves. Engineer Sparks and Fireman Egan crawled out from under the locomotive, badly bruised and scalded. The baggageman had a leg broken. All the passengers in the sleepers got out uninjured except slight bruises, but one day coach thirteen were injured and literally burned to death. Many others were injured by the sudden shaking up. The names of the victims have not yet been known here. The whole train except one sleeper, which they were able to uncouple and draw away, burned. Superintendent Collins was on the east bound passenger No. 2, which was waiting at a station a few miles this side of the wreck, for the limited, and was soon on the scene. A wrecking train with surgeons went from this city and did all possible to alleviate suffering and save life. Conductor Hankey of the freight train was so demoralized by the accident, the responsibility of which rests on his crew and thus also on him, that he took to the woods in despair, leaving the train. He has always been a most careful and efficient man, much trusted by the company. It was a most horrible and sickening spectacle, the dying people making night hideous with their screams, while the bystanders were unable to render assistance. It was the worst disaster ever known in the northwest.

LA CROSSE, WALKER, October 28.—A dispatch to the evening Wisconsin, from Rio, the scene of last night's railroad accident, says the limited express went through an open switch and plunged into a sand bank. The mail, baggage and express coach were piled on top of it. In the second coach there were twelve or thirteen persons. One man and two children were the only ones saved. The others were burned in the car. One of those who escaped was a man named [illegible] and was badly injured. He is now at his home in this city doing well. A woman at Rio, whose husband and children were in the car, threw a child out of a window and burned to death in the car. Brakeman Ed. Lull, Wolfersdorf of Rio, Wis., are among the dead. The remains of the latter cannot be identified, as only the charred trunk of the body is left of the ill-fated travellers. The tagging of the baggage obliterates all clue to the identity of the occupants of the sleeping car. It may never be known to a certainty how many perished in the wreck.

LA CROSSE, WALKER, October 28.—From the most reliable accounts obtainable to night the number who perished do not exceed five and these were all from the passenger coach next to baggage car. The only occupants who escaped were two boys, who with Mrs. A. C. R. Schiefer, of Winona, had been visiting them and to avoid them. Mrs. Schiefer was pinned down by wreck and severely injured, but the flames. Of the coach boys were burned to crisp. None of the charred remains can be identified. As far as learned up to 10 o'clock those who perished are: Mr. C. R. Schiefer, of Winona, Minn.; Mrs. R. Stodtmeister, Winona, her mother-in-law, Louis Bauer, residence unknown, a young woman believed to be Mrs. George A. Marr of Chicago, her identity, however, is very uncertain, Emil Walter, aged 10, three unknown, five or more unknown persons, two Sisters of Charity, one believed to be Mother Alexis, superior of the convent at Winona, who was in Milwaukee to establish a new convent. The injured include Conductor Lucius Searle of Milwaukee, badly hurt about the chest, but probably not fatally; Wade Clark of Oconomowoc, legs or ankles broken, Charles F. Smith, 516 Wabash avenue, Chicago, broken arm and wrist and face cut badly by broken spectacles, James Phillips, brakeman, cut badly about the head. No passengers in any of the sleepers were killed. Conductor Searle was in the baggage car at the shock occurred. With Brakeman Clark and Phillips, brakeman, he was pinned under several heavy trunks, unable to extricate themselves. To their horror they saw the flames burst in from one end of the car. Then doubled their efforts, and Phillips managed to crawl out. Conductor Searle then released Clark with a broken leg was gotten out and the three crawled through a window, as the flames had crept up to within a few feet of them. Conductor Searle is now lying prostrated at his home in Milwaukee and tells this story. He says as nearly as he can recollect occupants where the frightful incineration occurred included a woman with a little girl about six years; another dark-haired woman with a babe less than a year old, a blonde woman of 30, who seemed to be a companion of the former, both bound for St. Paul, two Sisters of Charity traveling on a pass. He can recall no description of any others, but says there was not to exceed fifteen altogether. He has lost his tickets, so there is no record.

MILWAUKEE, October 28.—A late dispatch to the Sentinel estimate the people burned at 20. A force of men has been engaged to-night in raking over the ruins of the coaches. At 11 o'clock the charred remains of eleven victims had been taken out. In the pocket of one man was an envelope addressed F. F. Owen, Chicago. A traveling man named Dibble was among the victims. Mrs. Lowery of Milwaukee also perished. Brinker and Wolfersdorff lived at Colchester, this state, at which they started their trip.

Conductor Hankey of the freight train who fled into the woods immediately after the catastrophe occurred has been found wandering around in a raving condition. He is likely to become a hopeless maniac.

Blaine's Tour

HAZLETON, Pa., October 28.—The Blaine party left Pottsville this morning in the rain. Blaine after his 500-mile ride and eight speeches of yesterday said he felt first rate. Arriving at Tamaqua at 8.45 he was introduced to a crowd of several hundred persons and made a short speech. The party was welcomed at Mauch Chunk at 9.30, and while the special train was transferred to the Lehigh Valley railroad Blaine addressed about 2000 people in Convent hall, speaking about ten minutes. The train stopped two minutes at Weatherly, where Blaine appeared on the platform and received cheers and acknowledged the compliment.

Colorado Valuation

DENVER, October 28.—The state auditor has received full returns from all counties in the state giving the taxables for 1885. The total revised valuation is an increase over last year of ten millions of dollars.

Mrs Stewart's Funeral

NEW YORK, October 28.—The funeral of Mrs. Cornelia M. Stewart, widow of the late dry goods millionaire, took place to day from her mansion on Fifth avenue. No one was admitted to the residence except relatives and friends of the deceased. The body was placed in a valuable casket with silver trimmings, and rested on a floral catafalque in the centre of the west parlor. The floral designs were numerous, most of which were made of smilax, ivy and roses. Fifth avenue and Thirty fourth streets in the immediate vicinity of the mansion was crowded with people, and a squad of police kept the street clear in front of the entrance at Thirty fourth street. Bishop Littlejohn and Rev. Arthur Brooks officiated and read a portion of the service from the ritual of the Episcopal church. At 3 p. m. the casket was borne from the steps on the shoulders of four undertakers' assistants and placed in the hearse. The funeral cortege took the Thirty-fourth street ferry. At Hunter's Point a special train took the remains and friends to Garden City, where the obsequies were held in the cathedral. About sixty people attended the services at the house and about sixty went to Garden City.

The Markets

NEW YORK, October 28.—The Produce exchange closed to day. Petroleum steady. United closed strong, governments dull and steady, state bonds dull and steady. Notwithstanding the general expectation that the Bartholdi celebration would interfere with business on the Stock exchange, the trading aggregated a larger amount than that of yesterday, and much more character was infused into the dealings. The general market was firm to strong throughout the day. Movements in the usually active stocks were, as a rule, unimportant. The opening was tame and heavy, but the changes from last night's figures were for insignificant fractions only. Trading was quiet and heaviness continued for a short time, but the market soon rallied under unusual strength displayed by certain specialties. The upward movement was slow, but continuous till the close, best prices being generally reached in the last half hour. The market closed strong.

A Novel Political Question

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 28.—[illegible] and democratic [illegible] to-day for the purpose of defeating [illegible] petition brought before the supreme court of Missouri by J. P. Vastine, the republican candidate for [illegible] criminal court, a writ of mandamus to compel [illegible] Vastine's name instead of that of J. G. Lodge, nominated in place of Vastine, deceased. Mr. Vastine received the nomination from the regular republican convention, but certain charges were brought against him and a second convention was called which removed his name from among the list of candidates and substituted that of Mr. Lodge. Mr. Vastine claims that his nomination was illegal and derives from the supreme court his commission. A decision cannot be reached in the case before the end of the week, and if the decision is rendered Monday Recorder-elect Lodge will not come to trial till after election.

A Horrible Holocaust.

LOUISVILLE, October 28.—The Courier-Journal's Hopkinsville (Kentucky) special says: Advices from the Fourth Sunday Creek, Todd county, Kentucky, on Tuesday, William Lee, a farmer, went away from home on business, leaving his wife, five young children and two young ladies of the neighborhood, Miss Alice Carnes and Sallie Adams. During the night the house burned and all the inmates perished and their remains were found next day by the husband on his return. It is not known how the cabin caught fire, but the mother's remains were found clasping those of a boy, and the bed clothes near also said that an effort had been made to extinguish the fire. The remains of the others were found in the ruins.

The City Temple Tabooed

LONDON, October 28.—Rev. Hugh Reginald Haweis, vicar of St. James Episcopal church, Mary's Bone, was announced to preach to day in the City Temple, the congregation of which Rev. Joseph Parker is pastor. When the time for beginning the services arrived Mr. Haweis did not appear, and Dr. Parker announced to those who had assembled that Mr. Haweis' bishop had forbidden him to preach in the City Temple. This statement was received with cries of "shame, shame."

HAY.—John Adams of New York died suddenly while delivering a sermon in the pulpit of the Calvinist chapel in Bermuda, Wales. His illness was heart disease.

Postoffice Finances

WASHINGTON, October 28.—Estimated expenses of the postal service for the next fiscal year aggregate $55,212,150 while the appropriation for the current year was $51,385,-868, showing an increase in estimates for the next year of $976,256. The estimated ordinary revenue for the next fiscal year is $48,-902,900, and revenue from the money order system $650,000, making a total estimated revenue of $50,612,500. The estimated deficiency in receipts as compared with expenditures during the next year is placed at $4,729,-734, while it is estimated that the current fiscal year will show a deficiency of $7,413,914.

Asiatic Affairs

SAN FRANCISCO, October 28.—The steamer San Pablo arrived to day with Hong Kong dates to October 2d, Yokohama to October 16th. Joseph Rocruz, accomplice of Beirach, the Hong Kong forger, has been found guilty and sentenced to a year's imprisonment.

Though cholera in Japan is somewhat abating the mortality is still enormous. From September 27th to October 7th there were 6467 deaths in Tokio. Four hundred and eighty-three new cases occurred and 409 deaths. Returns for four weeks ending September 25th give 34,908 cases, 23,774 deaths. The average mortality was over 68 per cent.

The Bulgarian Crisis.

SOFIA, October 28.—At a private meeting of deputies at Tirnova belonging to the government party, it was unanimously decided to adhere to the government's policy toward Russia. General Kaulbars telegraphed to the regency advising raising of the state of siege at Sofia and Varna. The Russian consul at Varna threatens to order the Russian war ships to bombard the town unless the prefect permits free access of Russo-Bulgarian partisans to the Russian consulate, or if he tries to prevent the landing of sailors from the war ships. Members of the sobranje are preparing to elect a regent to replace Karaveleff.

Sentence of Death.

WASHINGTON, October 28.—The secretary of state made another effort to-day to secure further reprieve for R. E. Sproule, condemned to be hanged to-morrow at Victoria, B. C., for murder. No reply was received. It was presumed the Canadian government, who have postponed the execution three times upon the request of the American department of state, will not show further leniency. The American consul at Victoria is thoroughly imbued with the belief that Sproule is innocent, which belief is shared by the mayor and many prominent British citizens of Victoria.

Press Prosecutions.

BERLIN, October 28.—Abbe Collin, editor of Lorraine, published at Metz, has been indicted for trial for attacking judges concerned in the recent sentencing of Abbe Cabaret for invoking divine protection of the French army. Herr Schultz, editor of the Hamburg Journal, has been sentenced to one month's imprisonment for attacking Bavarian ministers dealing with the late King Ludwig. Discontent is growing in Bavaria at the incessant press prosecutions.

Irish Taunts.

DUBLIN, October 28.—United Ireland tells Irish tenants that the time for patient endurance is passed, and says it is time for them to stand up and fight hard, hitting from the shoulder. The unionists, it says, have been in power for six months and have not made an attempt to suppress the national league, which is stronger, more active and more predatory than ever, and laughs at government devices, bluster and threats. The paper taunts the government with being afraid to use coercion.

Manning Returns.

WASHINGTON, October 28.—Secretary Manning will re-unite active control of the treasury department to-morrow, and Mr. Fairchild will be relieved of his duties as acting secretary, which office he has had from the time Mr. Manning was taken ill up to date.

Not Afraid to Fight Duels, Now

Pall Mall Gazette

An amusing story has been going the round of the French papers respecting a general who-se recent duelling exploits have excited some amusement both in England and on the continent. His worship's brave is said to be possessed of an extraordinary coat of mail. One day, as the story goes, General sent for a clever artisan in Paris, and demanded of him whether he would engage to make a coat of mail, to be worn under the ordinary dress, which should be absolutely sword and bullet proof. The man promised to do as required, naming 12,000 francs as the price of it. The bargain was speedily concluded, and in due time the article was brought round to the general's house. The general took it up, carefully examined it, and turning to the man, told him to put it on. The trio did as he was bid.

"As you guarantee the efficacy of your coat, you will have, I presume, no objection to my testing it," drily remarked the general and before the astonished artisan could protest, he took a brace of pistols and discharged them. Half dead with fear, the man stood the fire, and to the great credit of his workmanship, with complete impunity. But the general was not content with one trial. He fired a second pistol at the back of the man, and afterward discharged a fowlingpiece at him with similar effect, or rather non effect. He also tried in vain to pierce the coat with a sword. The gallant general was so delighted with his new garment that he handed the artisan two checks for 10,000f., the first being the sum agreed on, and the second check in compensation for the fright he had given him.

The Trinidad Advertiser of the 27th inst says It is now a fixed fact that D L Robinson will retire from the management of the Atlantic & Pacific road on November 1st and will shortly thereafter assume the management of the Colorado Midland road, a new road now in course of construction from Leadville across the main range of the Rocky mountains to Aspen The road will ultimately be extended east from Leadville to Colorado City, and it is generally believed that the Missouri Pacific is putting up the money for the construction with the ultimate purpose of making a connection that will in the end give it a trans-continental line

We were somewhat in error in our article of Wednesday last regarding the circulating libraries at present existing in our city. The Grace church free reading room is not in any sense a circulating library, as books cannot be removed Both the college and the High school have libraries chiefly of reference but neither they nor the Young Men's Christian association can keep the run of new books as they issue from the press nor can they procure popular works, especially of fiction to meet the wishes of subscribers Admirable as all these undoubtedly are, they are not circulating libraries in the accepted sense, nor can this business succeed without a thorough knowledge of books and authors, as well as of the popular taste The only circulating library in this city is that of Mrs. Garstin's, on Kiowa street.

The Methodist church was completely filled last evening the occasion being the first dime concert of the season given under the auspices of the Sunday school of the church The programme was presented as announced, with the exception of one number All of the numbers were liberally applauded The representation of the apparent changes of flowers and autumn leaves by twenty five little girls in costume, led by Miss Katie Corman was a very interesting feature of the evening's entertainment. The "representation" was a production of Dr F G Hord the superintendent of the school, and the little girls who participated in its presentation performed their respective parts in a creditable and acceptable manner The selections by Barnes' orchestra were also very favorably received Dr Horn announced that the Sunday school hoped to give a concert once every month, and that every effort would be put forth to make them as interesting and attractive as possible

Yesterday morning Mr F H Russell, agent of the D T, & G R R, at Granger, telegraphed Mr H I Bennett, the local agent of the company, to inform Coroner Davis that a man had died in a cabin three miles east of Granger under suspicious circumstances The coroner immediately left for the locality on receipt of the information and returned last evening with the remains of the deceased man Upon investigating the matter the coroner found that the name of the man was J S Barr and that he in company with another had reached Granger on Wednesday afternoon with the intention of locating homesteads claims They informed Mr Russell that Mr W D Hutchison of this city had left them at that point when they had, coming from Colorado City via Fountain Yesterday morning one of the two came to Granger and informed Mr Russell that Barr died on Wednesday evening in a cabin about three miles east of the station The coroner also ascertained the fact that the man on the evening before had escaped out on the prairie until 12 at night, when Barr became quite ill and they were forced to break into a cabin Soon after this Barr died and his partner left for Granger to send information to the coroner Coroner Davis upon the discovery thought that an inquest was unnecessary as the man evidently died a natural death
